INTRODUCTION

The rapidly evolving information landscape has transformed the way we learn, teach, and access information. In this digital age, information literacy has become crucial for students, educators, and professionals. As the guardians of information, librarians play a vital role in promoting information literacy and transforming education.

Information literacy is no longer just a set of skills, but a mindset that enables individuals to critically evaluate, synthesize, and apply information to solve real-world problems. As educators, librarians are uniquely positioned to foster this mindset and empower students to become lifelong learners.

However, the changing information landscape also presents challenges for librarians. The proliferation of fake news, disinformation, and misinformation has made it increasingly difficult for students to discern credible sources from unreliable ones. Moreover, the sheer volume of information available online can be overwhelming, making it difficult for students to navigate and evaluate sources effectively.

In this context, librarians have a critical role to play in transforming education through information literacy. By teaching students how to find, evaluate, and use information effectively, librarians can empower them to succeed in an increasingly complex and interconnected world. This presentation will explore the librarian's perspective on transforming education through information literacy, highlighting best practices, challenges & opportunities for collaboration and innovation.
